Ir has been generally known that for many months past an effort has once more been made by European merchants here and at Canton to take advantage of the Treaty right, of sending foreign goods into the interior of the Kwangtung province under cover of transit passes. This old and vexed question was believed by the Chinese to have been set at rest here in the South owing to the marvellous indifference shown for many years by the European hongs. Now a determined policy seems to be forced upon .. H. B. M. Consular General at Canton, in view of our correspondent's account of the high handed treatment of the Canton authorities. Perhaps the day has gone by when the treatment of native Christian is sufficient to arouse the Consular ire; bu such a high-handed and (so far as appears) uncalled-for proceeding as that recounted in another column surely calls for action of a decided kind. It is a most regrettable circumstance that the Foreign Merchants did not avail themselves of the transit pass right years ago; but now that progress has succeeded in stamping out and putting an been made in this direction, it would be a the advance to be cheaked.

A GOOD STORY .- A good story is being told about the Duke of Westminster. He recently covoted some ourious wall decoration in a house at which he called. It suggested fifteenth century leatherwork, and yet was clearly of a cheaper material. His Grace could not stoop to ask his parvenu host successive days, the only offence alleged what it was, but ordered his own decorator to get a look at it sub rosd. They both concluded it must be the result of a 'foreign process,' and the decorator went all over Europe—at the Duke's expense—to find it out, but failed. Then his Grace, after a struggle, brought himself to ask the owner of the house what it was. It was only common-canvas, cunningly toned and ombossed in high relief. The foreign process' turned out to be the discovery of an old workman who had been a picture mounter in his poutly and in his dang, had drifted into the service of a Scotch firm of wallpaper makers, who are now making a fortune out of his invention.

The improvement is attributed solely to the actual needs of minufacturers, who have received, it is admitted, very important orders for the spring trade. We are glad to note that there has been an increased demand for China sike, under the influence of China advices, prices rising c.25 to c.50 per kilo, and a considerable number of holders, we learn, have shown little desire to sell, even at the advance. Cantons and Japan silks have been, likewise, in better demand, prices in these cases, also, showing an improvement of about c.50 per kilo.

THE INDIAN NATIVE PRESS. There can be no doubt that the Native Chiefe of India are deeply grateful to the Government of India for the measures taken some time ago, by which us scrupulous journalists are prevented from lovying chantage with impunity. Formerly any clever scribbler could open a press within the little patch of British territory containing a Residency, or assigned as cantonment, in a Native State, and proceed to levy blackmail from this or that Raja, by publishing or threatening to publish scurrilous attacks upon him and his method of administration. He well knew that no Chief would willingly go into a court of law to prosecute him, and that he was quite safe from personal punishment so long as he resided within Residency or cantonment limits. If his wretched newspaper had been issued in the Native State itself, it would have been summarily suppressed, and he would probably have lost what little porty he personed. By the new regulation the system of terrorising over the Chiefs has, in a great measure, been put an end to: the attacks, if made, must be carried on from a distance, where they are necces sarily less effective than before. One ingenious plan is to sand a proof-sheet of an article, with the intimation that it will shortly be published, there being all the time not the least intention of doing anything of the kind. In such cases the abuse is pitched in the highest key, as the latter's employ, and is tried for this offence.

MR RUDYARD KIPLING ON THE CHENESE AND THE LABOUR QUESTION.

In the course of an interview with an Australian journalist, Mr Rudyard Kipling made some allusions to the labour question, and in this connection made reference to the necessity for Australians considering the importance of the Chinaman as factor in the labour problem .- 'Is i not rather early in your history. he asks, 'with a mere handful of popula tion, to have half that population crowded into the cities while the lands lie an idle wilderness, and men are striking against overwork while Governments are paying big wages on relief works for the unemployed? It is all very well now for labour to make these demands. By-and-by you will be cut under. sure. Other peoples will come in when they find room here, unless your population grows at an enormous rate. There are the Chineso close against you waiting their time, and learning from you. Don' think that every blow, every kick, every curse, and every wrong done or every Chinaman murdered in Prizco or insulted in Australia is not told and remembered over there in China when those fellows go home. They may not let out about here. What would be the use? But when they are sitting over the evening pipe it goes round and round, and every Oninaman's grievance goes through the land from the coast line right back to the mountains of Tartary, and nursed up against you for a long settling they have to make when the time comes. There is a hig score to be wiped out, and if rour Mustralians could see them as I have in their native towns, where you meet eyes in every orevice till you might think the very stones in the street are made of flesh and blood, then you might get an idea of the force you will have to reckon with. And besides their grand population, their coast and rivers give them a supply of born sailors who would carry them just where they wanted to go. If white men wen't work other men will.
